Springer-Verlag New York Inc., United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 2006 ed.. 235 x 155 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .On March 15, 1901, Henri Benard defended his thesis entitled Les Tourbillons cellulaires dans une nappe liquide propageant de la chaleur par convection en régime permanent at the University of Paris, Sorbonne. The results contained in this thesis have been at the origin of recent intensive research activities on cellular structures observed in many physicochemical systems far from equilibrium: instabilities, spatio-temporal patterns, chaos, and turbulence. The French Physical Society organized a scientific meeting to commemorate the centenary of Benard's thesis, at the Ecole Supérieure de Physique et Chimie Industrielles de Paris (ESPCI). This meeting, which gathered approximately one hundred scientists and graduate students working in nonlinear science, was honored by the presence of the director of the ESPCI, Professor Pierre-Gilles de Gennes, Nobel laureate in physics (1991), who gave the opening talk. At the conference, lectures were given by internationally recognized scholars who have contributed to the development of Benard's work: J.E. Wesfreid, P. Manneville, Y. Pomeau, M. Velarde, J. Gollub, M. Provansal, G. Nicolis, B. Castaing, and P. Coullet. A poster session and a round table on further development in nonlinear physics were organized. In the present...
